HOCKEY.

In one of the hardest fought and most gruelling hockey games witnessed on local ice this season, McGill defeated Toronto University on Saturday night at the Mount Royal Arena, winning by the score of 3 to 1. It was the first encounter of the two universities since 1915, when the Intercollegiate Hockey Union was suspended, and was attended by a crowd of over fifteen hundred spectators. The great majority of these were students, who braved the coldest weather of the winter in order to back up their team. They were rewarded by seeing from the start, when Sir Arthur Currie faced off the puck, till the very end, a game that was fast and interesting.

Previous to the game, the supporters of Toronto were offering odds of two to one on their team, and, as a consequence, their defeat at the hands of the Red and White came as a considerable jolt. McGill's victory was deserved, for although Varsity played well at times, in the essential elements of the game they were out-generated and out-played. The game showed conclusively once again that good coaching and training are the important things in hockey as well as in any other sport. The Red and White sextette have been thoroughly taught to keep in their proper positions at all times, always to watch the man in the corresponding position on the opposing team, to play combination and not to hog the puck, and never to let up in their back-checking.

The results of having learned these

CITY LEAGUES.

Intermediate Hockey.

The unbroken string of victories accumulated by the Intermediate Hockey team was increased on Saturday night by McGill's victory over the Nationals. The game itself was so very one-sided that the only really noticeable feature was the absence of riotous which was manifested. "Shag," the time-keeper and a dozen students composed the audience, and although the outcome of the game seemed fairly certain, nevertheless it is a pity that a representative McGill team should be practically without supporters.

From the face-off of the puck, the Nationals were hopelessly outclassed in a manner which the score does not indicate. Without the necessity of having to play good hockey, the Red and White took matters easily in spite of Shag's requests to get a twenty goal lead.

The game opened, and play went to the Nationals' end at once. A three-man combination went the length of the ice, passed the defence, but failed to score. A minute later McGill carried the puck, goal-keeper and a defence man into the nets, but the goal was disallowed.

The first goal was scored by a rush from Kelly, who passed to McLaughlin, who in turn gave Gallery the puck for a goal. One minute later McLaughlin centred from behind the Nationals' goal, and the puck bounced off a National shin into goal. The third was netted by Fowler six minutes later on a lone rush through the defence, and a fourth followed soon afterwards, when McLaughlin jabbed the puck into the corner of the goal.

The second half was a duplication of the first. The Nationals never really broke through the defence during the whole game, and Timmins did what little he was called on to do with one hundred per cent. efficiency. The closest the Nationals got to a goal was when Davis, in recovering the puck, got in the way of Gallery, who, bent on the same quest, bumped him onto the ice, fell on top of him and left the puck for the Nationals to shoot.

Three more goals were scored in the last period, two on passes to Davis and one on a rush from Gallery, leaving the final score 8-0 for McGill.

The Intermediates' next game is to be a hard one and should receive better support than this one. It is to be with Shamrocks, on the Victoria Rink. The admission is only a quarter and should be paid by many.

Intermediate Basketball.

The McGill Basketball team "B" played against the Highlanders on Saturday. The play was rather slow during the first half, except at the end, when it brightened up considerably. The McGill team showed the effects of a lot of hard work in their combination, which was good. There was a certain amount of deficiency shown in the passing, however, a condition which lost points to the McGill team. Fortunately this proved to be only temporary, and lasted only during the first half. The score at half-time was 18-15 in favor of the Intermediates.

The second half was quite different from the first. A very good brand of basketball was played by McGill throughout this period. Passing improved noticeably, while Amaron, playing defence and Parlow scoring points, starred for the team. The final score was 23-21 for McGill. It was a pity that the McGill team was incomplete, as the only spare had to play throughout the entire game.

The line-up was as follows:

BASKETBALL.

McGill won the second game in the Intercollegiate Basketball League on Saturday afternoon, when she defeated Varsity by a score of 21-20. It was ungame of the year.

Varsity had a great advantage in weight, her representatives averaging from ten to fifteen pounds in their favor. She has a strong pair of backs in Logan and Graham. Her forwards required careful watching.

showed some smooth team work, and

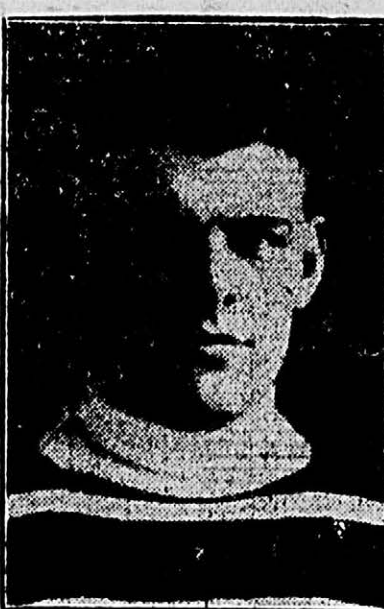

McGill's superiority lies in physical condition and combination. Last Saturday her team showed the result of coaching. Nevertheless, love for sensational plays at times wrecked their team-work. Perrault netted two baskets and played a good game, but he shows an unhealthy fondness for long shots, even when there is an opening for a pass. Little, who is in his first year, has a great deal of speed and is a the game. Hay was the pick of the for-tricky shot. He is a coming star in wards. He scored eight points in the first period. The Varsity guards, not to mention their centre, were wise in sticking to him during the second half. Montgomery and Kern played an unusually strong defensive game, and did some spectacular work in Varsity's final rush.

The efficiency the guards of both teams displayed made shooting somewhat hasty and erratic.

down during the first five minutes. Varsity scored the first point on a penalty shot, netting again on a second penalty a moment later. Soon after she netted a basket, making a 4-0 score. Through a double foul, Kern scored the first point for McGill, Logan, who shot the penalties for his team, failing to add to Varsity's score. A Varsity forward was fouled while shooting, but Logan failed to make good on the two shots awarded as a result. Another foul gave Varsity their fifth point. Kern scored on a penalty. Varsity's combination became badly bent when Hay dropped in two baskets in rapid succession. Little soon increased McGill's lead with a clever shot. Perrault tried a long shot, but cannoned off a dangling ring trapeze into one of the side baskets. The rooters were heard from at last. The opposing forwards finally got away again, netting the ball twice, Varsity again taking the lead. Holmes, a Toronto forward, was injured, Preston replacing him. McGill went head a second time through a snappy bit of work by Hay. Perrault followed with a neat shot. In the minute following, McGill had several shots but failed to get the range, the rival forwards finally breaking through and scoring. Soon after, Hay, on a nice pass from Kern, made his fourth successful shot. Half time score—McGill, 14; Varsity, 11.

Second Period.

Varsity again opened with a strong offensive, scoring two baskets and taking the lead in the first minute of play. Kern tied the score on a penalty

Two More Victories

Once again McGill has proven successful in the field of sport. It is indeed a glorious day for our Alma Mater when she can turn in two victories in Senior intercollegiate events in the same twenty-four hours. Yet that has been done twice within the last two weeks, on one occasion against Queens and the other one occurring last Saturday when Toronto University went down to defeat before the local Collegians in hockey and basketball.

In hockey, the McGill sextette proved victorious after one of the most bitterly contested games seen here in a long time. Red and White showed the results of the long and arduous training that they have undergone since the beginning of the winter. They played splendidly both on the offensive and defensive. In fact they worked together like a smooth, well oiled machine throughout. Although both teams fought hard from start to finish, the game was comparatively free from rough play, and even in the last few minutes, when the Blue and White were trying desperately to penetrate McGill's iron defence, all the men exhibited a consistently clean brand of hockey.

In basketball, McGill succeeded in winning out by the odd point in forty one. The play was close throughout and the final result was in doubt until the last moment of play. Great credit must be given the team for the manner in which they upheld the honor of the Red and White.

Taking Stock

Did you ever stop to take stock of yourself? This business method might well be applied by men to their personal affairs and undertakings. Particularly might it be applied with advantage by students, for these few years in college are golden years and at their end one should be able to show an improvement commensurate with their value. They are formative years, too, and habits acquired during them have a faculty of taking on permanence with amazing ease. That practice so carelessly begun will, almost before you are aware of it, have become an ingrained part of you. How essential it becomes, therefore, that we "check up" periodically and note progress, or its absence, and the degree thereof.

During each year you put in so much money, so much time and so much energy towards acquiring what we are pleased to call an education. What do you get from it? The only way to answer this definitely is to take stock, to set down as nearly as may be possible what has been gained during the twelvemonth and, perhaps of equal importance, what has been lost. It is always unfair to yourself and in cases where others are supplying the necessary funds it is also unfair to them if you do not know with some degree of accuracy whether the year has been marked by progress or retrogression.

It is your life you are investing. You cannot call the moving finger back but by taking your bearings occasionally you may arrive at some conclusion as to the direction in which it is travelling. Then if the direction is a wrong one the finger, being moving, may perhaps be made to change it. Here money is carefully checked whenever it changes hands and goods are inventoried at least once a year. Money and goods, having been squandered, may be accumulated again but no part of that infinitely more precious thing we call life can be recalled and revived. Life always offers one chance and usually only one. Make that chance good. Know where you are going. Take stock.

The B., W. and F. Club

When a club that has as well-established a record as the McGill Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Club can boast of, it is disappointing to see that club dwindling into insignificance at the most important stage of the year's efforts. The club, as all know, was most enthusiastically encouraged and supported at the beginning of the season. It obtained the best of instructors, and employed the best means of club organization possible. It gave a smoker recently that was outstanding in its excellence. Its members, by their willingness to perform at the various sectional and club smokers during the past months, have very materially contributed to success of the functions. And now, in spite of all that has been done, the club is losing ground, the men who were but a few weeks ago brimming over with enthusiasm at its activities are no longer participating in the practices and are apparently indifferent as to its success or failure. This, of all times, is the one at

McGill Union,

Saturday, Jan. 31st, 1920

President McGill "Daily,"

McGill Union,

Montreal.

Sir:—

In the letter in Saturday's "Daily" dealing with my editorial entitled "The Necessity of the Military Spirit at McGill," and signed by you and the Editor-in-Chief, it is stated that the writer "has tendered his resignation, and that it has been accepted." It is true that I offered my resignation verbally several times to J. N. Petersen, the Editor-in-Chief. He definitely refused to accept it each time, the last being at about 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon. It is strange too that after the attitude adopted by your letter nothing was said to me when I went to have my photograph taken together with you and the rest of the News Board at 1 o'clock on Saturday at Notman's studio. Inexplicable to me also is the fact that my name has not been deleted from the list of news editors printed above the editorial columns. I think some explanation is due for what appears to me a deliberate misstatement.

I have not spoken to you personally on the subject of my editorial. I conclude from what was published on Saturday that you both disapprove of it and misunderstand it. You have read unwarrantable interpretations into it. In the first place you state that my editorial deals with the "reorganization of the C.O.T.C. at McGill." I avoided that subject entirely, and in fact only mentioned the C.O.T.C. twice towards the end of the article, one of those times being merely in connection with a reference. Further you say I attached the honor of some prominent graduates. I might as well have been accused of attacking the honor of the government simply because two men were mentioned in an editorial protesting against "the military spirit" no inference can be drawn that an allegation, however vague, has been made against them. As regards your statement that: "if there are sufficient students at the university who wish to carry on military training there should, by all means, be some organization such as the C.O.T.C." This is entirely beside the point. My editorial was simply an exposition of some remarkable evidence of "the military spirit at McGill," and was not a protest against a voluntary C.O.T.C.

I adhere absolutely to the statements made in my original article, "The Necessity of the Military Spirit at McGill," that very phrase was repeated to me, as having been used, by several members of the Returned Men's Undergraduate Society within ten minutes of the close of the meeting held on Tuesday, Jan. 27th. As regards the "sports meeting" held on Wednesday, I was present at it, and the conclusion reached seems to me perfectly justified. We were spoken to about the financial needs of McGill, and at the end we were told that if a good showing was made at the dinner some assistance might be forthcoming from the government. I think the majority of those present considered the purpose of the meeting as propagandist, certainly the three men sitting next me did so emphatically. I stated that the Returned Men's Undergraduate Society refused their support for the dinner, which was based on what the Editor-in-Chief told me either on Tuesday or Wednesday evening. As regards the letter published in Saturday's "Daily," I can only say that the executive may have given their support but the matter was never voted upon. A large number of the members of the society were ignorant of the decision, and there certainly existed a group which very much opposed it.

The history of the organization of the dinner I have based on quotations from the "Daily's" for the dates mentioned. As regards my statement that graduates of senior rank and not undergraduates were making the arrangements, I will give you one example: On Wednesday evening about 10 o'clock a graduate of the rank of colonel came into the "Daily" office to see the Editor-in-Chief. He gave him a few unimportant facts concerning the dinner, and then he asked him to come outside that he might speak to him privately. This conference lasted for nearly 10 minutes. This I shot at all to be construed that I re-which the club must have support. The Assault-at-Arms is but a fortnight away: the Intercollegiate fixture, that which caps the climax of the season's activities, is scheduled for March fifth and sixth. McGill is going to be represented at the meet, and it is the B., W. and F. Club that is going to represent her there. With these dates ahead, no other inducement should be necessary to stimulate interest in one of the finest and most active of our minor clubs. This organization is going to represent us in the intercollegiate event, and that must be a whole-hearted and adequate representation. For the sake of McGill, stay with the B., W. and F. and help her bring more honors to our college cent the actions of certain graduates as an intrusion. In fact I am convinced that unless there is much greater co-operation between graduates and the student body that the graduate society can do very little to aid McGill.

When I spoke of the money grant I based figures on what had been said by several graduates and undergraduates. One instance was when a professor during a lecture period in physics of Arts '23 appealed for their support of the dinner and stated exactly similar figures. This occurred on Friday and consequently in itself constitutes a powerful proof of the correctness of my information, since the professor in question was connected with the Management of the dinner. As to the rumor which was current last November concerning compulsory military training at the University, I point you to the reference to the proposed "arsenal" contained in the Broadside published at about that time. The authorities have never denied it. If you wish fuller proof I can quite easily produce several witnesses. The quotation, "The Government bids fair to establishing McGill as a great centre of military instruction" is extracted from an article about the C.O.T.C. published in the "Daily."

I think I have proved that my editorial was not composed of mere unfounded opinion, as you declared repeatedly in Saturday's "Daily." My statements are of fact, and so far they have not even been denied by people. They have been stigmatized by you as unfounded opinion. Against this mere accusation I have given proof of my statements. If facts run counter to your editorial policy, some explanation will have to be forthcoming for the latter; facts cannot be altered. In your letter you stated that you had been assured before you left the office "that the main editorial was of the entitled 'Philosophy,' and was to conform in all details to the editorial policy of the paper." Both these statements are false. I told you I would write an editorial on philosophy—not necessarily the main, that was only implied in my mind. I did and it bore the title of "The Mark." As regards your statement that I assured you that my editorial would "conform in all details to the editorial policy of the paper." This is ridiculous. I have time and again questioned you on this very subject. You have always put me off with vague and indefinite replies. Therefore to say that I assured you that I would conform to the editorial policy, which owing to your reticence I didn't know, is absurd. What you did say when leaving the office was to the effect that I should discuss nothing "controversial" in the editorial columns. At most I said that the article on philosophy would not be controversial, in any case I did not give you an assurance that nothing controversial would enter the editorial columns. I said practically the same to the editor-in-chief. I gave absolutely no assurance in either case.

I may have been wrong in withholding certain things from you. But I had determined to break away from the obscurantist policy which has characterized the "Daily" throughout the session. As a news editor I conceived my duty to lie rather towards the student body than to you and the editor-in-chief. I demand a public apology for a statement, which you in conjunction with the Editor-in-Chief publicly made. I trust that you will find room to insert this rather lengthy statement in the "Daily" to be published on Monday morning, February 2nd. It constitutes my defence.

LEWIS ERIC REFORD.

(Ed. Note.—Mr. L. E. Reford states in the early part of his letter that he verbally offered his resignation several times and that it was refused by the Editor-in-Chief. About five o'clock Friday evening he stated that after what the Editor-in-Chief had said to him he could not remain on the paper and offered to resign. The Editor-in-Chief said absolutely nothing to this but afterwards discussed the matter with the President and together they decided to accept the resignation. As far as refusing to accept his repeated offers of resignation the Editor-in-Chief did not wish to take entire responsibility and determined to discuss the matter with his colleagues. Again Mr. Reford had told him that the President had stated that if he (Mr. Reford) was sure of his facts to go ahead and write the editorial. This Mr. Reford absolutely denies. Moreover, Mr. Reford has on numerous occasions been told both by the President and myself that the Correspondence columns was the proper place to express such views and in addition under his own signature. Without knowing the truth or falsity of this statement of Mr. Reford's, the Editor-in-Chief did not feel like accepting the resignation of his own accord.

When the former news editor appeared to have his picture taken with the rest of the News Board Saturday morning the President and Editor-in-Chief did not wish to ask him to depart after he had worked on the paper for three-quarters of the year.

Friday night the name of Mr. Reford was crossed from the list of the staff, which was sent to the printers, but they failed to omit it.

Mr. Reford claims that his statement, to the effect that the Returned Men's Undergraduate Society refused their support for the dinner, was based on information received from the Editor-in-Chief is untrue in as much as the Editor-in-Chief was unaware of any meeting of the Returned Men to discuss this matter and was also unaware of any decision reached at this meeting.

We can find no facts outlined in Mr. Reford's letter. What he offers as facts appear to us more as deductions, which do not warrant the insinuation that compulsory military training is to be enforced on the University.

In the routine work of the "Daily" office we are not accustomed to quibble with words, and when we were informed by the writer of the above letter that his editorial other than the note on the Mork Parliament was to have Philosophy as its subject we trusted him and did not think it necessary to cross-examine him. He made no mention of still another editorial and had no authority to insert another without our knowledge.

Mr. Reford has had ample opportunity during the past year to read over our editorials and to find out from them what is our policy. His secrecy in the matter of Friday's editorial proves that he was aware that it would not receive our sanction and so must have been contrary to our editorial policy.

Mr. Reford's duty as a member of the "Daily" is first towards his superiors on the staff of that paper. If he was of opinion that his article was for the good of the student body he could quite easily have used our correspondence column and should have done so when he wished to express his personal opinion and not that of the Managing Board of the paper. We have made no statement in the columns of the "Daily" which demands an apology.)

The President McGill "Daily,"

Sir:—

I have seen the letter of Mr. L. E. Reford in defense of his editorial which appeared in the "Daily" Friday, January 30th, under the heading of "The Necessity of the Military Spirit at McGill." His views may have been founded on fact but merely expressed the opinion of one man or, at best, that of a few members of the student body. As the Students' Council is responsible for the policy of the McGill "Daily" and, as this council had not declared itself as opposed to the affair in question, and as a number of its members were working for its success and the furtherance of the idea which was an important part of it, it seems rather that Mr. Reford has taken things in his own hands in going absolutely counter to their wishes. What is more, it was contrary to the declared editorial policy of the "Daily," which appeared in previous editorials relating to the same subject.

I consider that Mr. Reford's use of the editorial columns of the "Daily" was an absolute breach of confidence on his part. As his letter admits, he inserted this editorial without appro-

MCGILL PLAYS VICTORIAS IN IN CITY LEAGUE

Double-Header To-Night At Mount Royal Arena.

CRUCIAL GAME.

Hard Game With Varsity Will Handicap McGill Team.

The McGill Senior hockey team will play their fourth game in the City League to-night, when they meet Victorias in the first game of a double header to be played at the Mount Royal Arena. The first contest is scheduled to commence sharp at 8.00 o'clock. The second will be staged between Westmount and M.A.A.A.

Both to-night's fixtures should be closely fought, as the four leading teams of the league will clash. Consequently, it is expected that there will be some changes in the standing of the clubs after the results of the matches are known.

The Red and White team has just gone through a very strenuous game with Varsity, but the men managed to come through without receiving any major injuries. They were considerably knocked up, but will doubtless be in pretty good trim for to-night.

In meeting Victorias for the first time this season, the Red and White are running up against an aggregation that is rated to be a formidable sextette. They are at present tied for first place with M.A.A.A., each having three victories and one defeat chalked up against them. McGill and Westmount are tied for second place, each having won two games and lost one so far. Hence it can be seen that in order to keep in the running, McGill must turn in a victory over Victorias, and with the support of the students, they should be successful in maintaining their place near the top of the league.

The Red and White were doing most of the attacking, and at this stage had a distinct edge on their opponents. Finally, after one of the visitors' rushes had been broken up, Heney secured the puck, and, when near centre ice, passed to Behan on the wing, who netted the puck on a beautiful shot into the corner, thus giving the Red and White a lead that they never relinquished.

At this point, Varsity increased their efforts, and the play was fairly even for some time. It was not long, however, before Earle Anderson, taking a long shot that caught Langtry by surprise, established McGill's lead more firmly by giving them a two-goal advantage over their opponents.

Varsity came right back and tried combination were broken up by the terrific checking of the whole McGill team. The first penalty of the game landed towards the latter part of the game was handed out by Referee Harry Hy-period, when V. Heney was sent off for tripping. In spite of playing one man short, Varsity could not break away they were subjected to. At this stage on account of the close checking that the Red and White were playing a more defensive game, and Clarke was called on to make several sensational stops.

"Boo" Anderson opened up the second period by rushing dangerously. Shortly afterwards he was put off for tripping. Varsity tried hard to score, but McGill's defence was too much for them. For a while Toronto forced the play, but the Red and White soon livened up and got away to some rushes that gave Langtry some difficult shots. During the greater part of this period McGill was obliged to play a man short, on account of the severity of the referee, and as a consequence the visitors did most of the attacking. All their efforts proved futile, however, largely owing to the great defensive work of the home team as well as to the failure of the Blue and White to use combination. Towards the end of the period, McGill again had the better of the play, Langtry making some spectacular saves. Just before the end, Behan secured a loose puck near the visitors' goal, fooled the defence, drew out the goalkeeper, and scored. It was a brilliant piece of work.

With a three-goal lead to their credit, the Red and White team was cheered to the echo as the men came on the ice for the last period. Each team attacked in turn, and both Langtry and Clarke made some spectacular stops. The play was even, but towards the end, especially at one time when the local team was a man short, due to Heney having been put off, Toronto tried desperately to score. The steady work of Clarke in goal, however, foiled them, for on several occasions he was called on to make some very difficult

IMPRESSIONS OF S. V. CONVENTION

Given In Entertaining Manner At Last Night's Sing.

Last evening's sing at the Hall was only in part a sing. The major portion of the evening was rather a "spiel" than a sing. The reading room was well filled, and the opening hymn, one of the old familiar tunes, was rendered with hearty sincerity. After the singing of a second hymn, Mr. MacKay introduced Miss Kerr, one of the R.V.C. delegates to the recent Des Moines Conference. Miss Kerr gave a very interesting and pointed talk on the Home Mission Field and the situation in Canada to-day. The facts that she brought before all issued a great challenge to Canadians. She was followed by Mr. Morrison, who gave a rather amusing, yet most vivid, description of the trip to Iowa and of the opening exercises of the Conference itself. He was followed by Mr. A. I. Smith, who gave his impression of the trip and the Conference, especially telling of an intercollegiate journalistic meeting held during the Conference for the purpose of furthering intercollegiate exchange. One little detail that he, in his wonted modesty, neglected to emphasize, was the fact that he was the one who organized this assembly.

P. Hatley, Sci. '23, next gave his impression of the Conference from the point of view of the science man, outlining the enormous field for men of all vocations in the field of missionary work. Miss Percival gave a short talk thereafter, in which she brought out the message that the Conference had for every student.

Miss Ruth Goodwin, R.V.C. '15, followed, dealing specially with the life of Sherwood Eddy and the change in the life of that man brought about in his student days through the challenge to him in a Conference speech. MacKie, five need of America living up to Arts '22, dwelt briefly on the imperious expectations and trusts of India and the other non-Christian countries who depend on her for leadership and example. J. W. Scott, Med. '21, ended the evening's talks by summarizing and telling of the place that Canada generally, and McGill especially, have taken in the Student Volunteer Movement of past years. He issued an invitation to all students to attend the weekly meeting, held in the Hall every Wednesday night, at which all who are interested in the work, or would like to discuss it, are invited and expected to attend.

The refreshments served during the evening were of the usual excellence that typifies the Hall's cuisine. All in all, it was a most sociable and profitable evening for those present. It is hoped that more of the same type will follow in the near future.

CORRESPONDENCE

val or consent of the Editor, and contrary to his orders not to insert anything of a controversial nature. Mr. Reford had a perfect right to use the correspondence columns of the "Daily" to express his own personal views. Rather than do this he has seen fit to go counter to the orders of his superiors and contrary to the expressed editorial policy of the "Daily" and of the Council, of which the "Daily" is the mouthpiece. The Students' Council has approved of the acceptance by the "Daily" management of his resignation and as far as the President of the "Daily" being asked for an apology, which I consider a piece of impertinence, I consider that it is Mr. Reford, rather than he, who should be asked for an apology. Mr. Reford may rest assured that no apology will be forthcoming.

It was intended to dismiss this matter by the approval by the Council of the "Daily's" acceptance of Mr. Reford's resignation, but since he has seen fit to pursue the matter, I consider that this expression of opinion on my part, on behalf of the Students' Council necessary.

I am, sir,

Sincerely yours,

PARISH HALL ENTERTAINED MAC. STUDENTS

Social Evening and Tea Much Enjoyed.

ADDRESSES HEARD.

Great Success Attended Efforts Of Church People.

The students of the College, both men and women, who are members of the Anglican Church, were given a treat to a sumptuous tea, followed by a programme and dance, Saturday night, by Rev. and Mrs. Lancaster, by 5.30 p.m. the guests had arrived at the parish hall and tea was served. The menu consisted of a variety of salads, cold ham, head cheese, rolls and butter, coffee. Following this sumptuous repast, cakes, ice cream, tea and past. Rev. Dr. Lancaster introduced the various speakers — the list comprising Dr. Rexford, Dr. Harrison, Dean Laird, Prof. Lochhead, Dr. MacFarlane and Prof. Barton. Each speaker said that in view of the dancing to be given at the close he would willingly cut down his talk.

Dr. Rexford, the first speaker, spoke upon the social features of man. He being a social animal, considered social gatherings necessary. The students of this College are to be congratulated upon their social advantages, being much in contrast to conditions in McGill University, owing to lack of residences there, he continued. Again, life, which he said could be remedied too much work and not enough social by putting more stress on the social features and sacrificing more of the studying periods. He concluded by congratulating Dr. Lancaster and warden of the church for the success of the social evening.

Dr. Harrison followed, expressing the social evening, practically the same sentiments as Dr. Rexford. Speaking of the great need for social advantages outside of College as well as within, he said that the present parish hall just fitted into a niche prepared for it. He was much pleased that it had opened to give social opportunities to students even out of college bounds. He laid special emphasis on the fact that he didn't wish to keep the students away from them. In conclusion, he congratulated Dr. Lancaster and Dr. Rexford for what had been done.

From here the speakers realized the time was growing short, and so when Dean Laird had been introduced, he said that to talk long would be not only a burden upon the audience, but wasn't exactly the best for the speaker that Dr. Lancaster had asked him about after such a hearty meal. He stated the dancing. After making enquiry to Dr. Harrison, he said that the only objection he (Dean Laird) had to offer was that he was too old to dance any more, and that he'd rather watch young people dance than amuse themselves in any other manner. He also concluded by thanking Dr. Lancaster and the church warden, and expressed the wish that the social evenings be continued and that he be invited.

The last speaker was Prof. Lochhead, who stated he'd never seen so many students at church before, and expressed himself sure that it was a good thing. He reiterated the statements of the former speakers in hoping that this would continue. Dr. MacFarlane was to time him by dropping his handkerchief at the end of five minutes, he said, but Dr. Lancaster informed him planning that, while he was not an that one minute only was allowed. Ex-Anglican, he knew most of that body here, and gave a glowing example of how people may neglect their opportunities. A certain young man here this evening asked me, "Who is that distinguished looking gentleman introduced the speakers?" (meaning Dr. Lancaster), which accorded him some, and Prof. Barton were asked to speak, what of a surprise. Dr. MacFarlane had declined owing to shortness of time for dancing.

Dancing was now in order, and the music during the forepart was rendered by the Misses Harrison, O'Leary and Murphy. Later this was augmented by the jazz-band. At 9.30 p.m. the college girls departed, escorted by the majority of the young men students. Many of the village folk came after nine o'clock and carried the dance on until 11 p.m. expressed hearty thanks of appreciation to their host and hostess for this unusual privilege.

ORCHESTRA.

To-night — Room 207 — 6.45 sharp — Regular weekly practice — "Oh, come and join our happy band!" As we have wandered around the corridors in the evening, we have often heard you sawing off those chunks of syncopated jazz-time melancholies. Come out to-night and try some "high-brow stuff" for a change. I promise you, our pieces are not a bit harder than those played by Sousa's Band. Come out and see for yourself. You don't think I write this stuff for fun, do you? It's results we want. Come out!

SKATERS FIND WEATHER COLD

Leap Year Festivity Becoming Popular at Macdonald.

Hearken one, hearken all,
To what I recall
From hearing folks relate
Events of the Leap Year Skate.

It was a bitter wind that blew over land and sea—principally land, and that little bit covered with ice—last Friday night. But, verily, the old saying, "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good," didn't apply this night, as presently out of the dark shadows of the College buildings and shady (?) trees crept figures into the light around the gleaming and inviting rink. Mother didn't forget to set a candle in the window for her wandering child (girls this time), so these fur burdened fair ones had no trouble in finding the dressing shack — comfortably warm. In these days you know it's customary to have Susie asks Paul for the "grand plaisir" of a few turns on those shiny new sleds he sports. Everything goes well, but Jack thinks to have some more fun, and blows that whistle. This is supposed to warn real, earnest skaters that the period of that pleasant skate is over. So unless you wish to be conspicuous, you naturally leave off. Femininity find it quite novel, inasmuch as it creates opportunity for rivalry among their numbers, also just a wee bit of revenge on Jack or Bill by way of enlightenment. The general sentiment among the boys was usually expressed in some such manner as, "the last time." Music was furnished "Gee, this is the coldest I've been since by Borens's band, to which a whirl or two of drifting snow would play an accompaniment — now and then — mostly now. The band played several selections something similar and monotonous. After about 7.40 p.m. there was, of which the crowd took small remained but a few skaters, and those who ventured to stay ran some risk of freezing the beautiful roses already implanted upon their cheeks.

N.B.—We are petitioning the W.M. for a more moderate evening in which to hold the next Leap Year Skate.

BASEBALL GAME.

The game of baseball between M.A.A.A. and Macdonald will take place at M.A.A.A. Gym at 9.45 p.m., to-day. The following is the line-up in batting order:

R.V.C. CLASS HOCKEY CLOSE

Sophs. Defeated First Year By Three To One.

In the first inter-class hockey match, held Saturday at 9 a.m. between first and second years, the Sophs came out with flying colors, with the score 3-1, not having termed it a fast game, it was. Though the McGill hockey teams might better than was expected, and afforded audience. The teams were greatly a good half-hour's amusement to the encouraged by this large audience, which consisted of Miss Wood, Miss Davidson, the hockey manager, and the caretaker of the rink. The game was of which the second proved the most divided into three ten-minute periods, exciting. The combination of the first year team was splendid, and far exceeded that of the second year. Unfortunately, owing to the sideboards being hidden by quantities of snow, they could not be used as rebounds. Yet these very heaps of snow proved a soft pillow for many unforeseen and untimely falls. In the first period, M. Fry made the first goal for second year. In the second period, A. Roy made one goal for the first year; and, in the third, E. Snyder made two goals, thus bringing the score 3-1 for the Sophs. The line-up is as follows:

1st Year
M. Murray.....Goal.....F. Brown
J. Mitchell.....Defence.....M. Fry
M. McConnell.....Defence.....V. Foisy
A. Roy.....Centre.....E. Snyder
J. Brankley.....R. Wing.....V. Zealand
M. Grigg.....L. Wing.....Ted Rough
the referee, that the two teams, as a whole, have their skates sharpened as soft piles of snow. It is hoped his advice will be followed by all.

The next matches will take place Wednesday, Feb. 4, at 3.30 p.m., between first and third years, second and fourth years. It is hoped the audience will be as large as at the previous match, and that there will be as much cheering.

Turn out, as you did on Saturday, and uphold your year.

CHESS TOURNAMENT.

In the schedule of games for the coming Chess tournament, the following match was omitted:

shot. He soon had a similar opportunity, but failed to get the ball. Perrault gave his team the lead again with a sensational shot from centre. He followed this with some more long range shooting, but failed to register.

Varsity finally found the basket again. Kern added a point on a penalty. McGill was awarded two more free shots in rapid succession. The second resulted in a score. Montgomery went down the floor and netted the ball with a clever shot. The visitors' superiority in weight gradually had its effect. McGill's backs were overworked. Montgomery was slightly injured but carried on, making some wonderful saves. Varsity scored. Fours became too frequent. The Blue and White made the most of their weight. A Varsity man was again fouled while shooting. Logan lost an opportunity to tie the score by netting the ball but once in the two resultant tries. The next few moments saw some fast work, but neither team added a point. Final score—McGill, 21; Varsity, 20.

The teams lined up as follows:

Varsity	McGill
Coles.....Forward	Perrault
Holmes.....Forward	Little
Bel.....Centre	Hay
Logan.....Guard	Kern
Graham.....Guard	Montgomery

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

The first lecture on Radio work will be given in the Physics Building on Wednesday, 4th Feb., at 5 p.m., by Col. A. S. Eve, on "Methods of Transmission."

The lecture is open to all those interested, whether they are members of the C.O.T.C. or not. There will be eight lectures in all by Dr. King and others, possibly by some of those with direct practical experience at the "Marconi Company of Canada."

On Thursday, 5th Feb., at 5 p.m., Lt. E. S. Bieler will open a course of lectures to those who, having no knowledge of wireless telegraphy, but having attended a course on Electricity, are anxious to obtain a clear knowledge of the principles of the subject.

The growing interest in radio work is indicated by the number of periodicals now issued relating to it. In addition to the proceedings of the American Institute of Radio Engineers, there are The Wireless Age, Electrical Experimenter, Everyday Engineering Magazine, Radio-Amateur News, Scientific American (Supplement), The Wireless World, Q.S.T. Wireless Monthly Magazine, and the Radio Review.

It may be of interest to add a list of books, by no means complete, bearing on the subject directly.

Fleming's Principles of Wireless Telegraphy and Telephony.
Eccles' Wireless Telegraphy and Telephony.

Laue & Brown's Radioengineering Principles.
Burgess' The Elementary Principles of Wireless Telegraphy.

Goldsmith's Wireless Telegraphy.
And others by Zenneck and by Stanley.

The Wireless Press also issues manuals namely: The Wireless Experimenters Manual, Vacuum Tubes in Wireless Communications, Radiotelephony, Radio Instruments and Measurements, and Practical Wireless Telegraphy.

The price of these manuals are from $1.75 to $2.00.

The de Forest and Marconi companies are selling large quantities of apparatus to amateurs, who can without much difficulty receive from near or distant stations.

THREE ESSAYS.

Bolshevism, Finland and Poland Treated in Excellent Manner.

The Historical Club of the Royal Victoria College held a most interesting meeting in the Faculty Room, on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The speaker of the evening was Miss Gwyneth Craig (Arts 19), who read a paper on "Bolshevism," and as this is a subject which is more or less on everyone's tongue today, the discussion was taken part in by all.

Organized socialism, said Miss Craig, is comparatively recent in Russia. In the latter part of the nineteenth century it was the cult of the students and intellectuals, whose task it was to instruct the workmen and poorer classes in their beliefs. Then in 1900 Lenin constituted the first fighting socialistic organization. A newspaper was published in Switzerland, and smuggled into Russia, to propagate the Bolshevistic theories—not the democratic control of party by the workmen, as is often supposed, but the dictatorship of secret committees over the masses. In 1903 at the Socialistic Conference in London, the Russian Socialists split into two groups, the Bolsheviks, or the majority party, under Lenin, and the Mensheviks, or the minority party, under Plehanov. The former stood for dictatorship of the party organization, and opposed all co-operation with the more moderate thinkers. They relied on exciting the revolutionary instincts of the proletariat, while the Mensheviks wished to admit the workmen to an intellectual equality with the leaders of the party. The Bolsheviks wanted to lead in a general social revolution, but the Mensheviks sought slow constitutional reform, because they felt that Russia could not at one bound pass from a feudal autocracy to a social republic.

When the war broke out in 1914, the Bolsheviks were not at all numerous in Russia, and had practically no power, but their influence was felt at various times, notably after the great retreat from Poland. It was Lenin's passage through Germany that first started the rumour of his being in German pay, but as a matter of fact none of the Bolshevik agents are paid by Germany—their pay comes from Russia. But Germany allowed the Bolsheviks to pass through her country, as any person who would sow the seeds of discontent in an enemy country was more than welcome to a passport. On Lenin's return from Germany he outlined the Bolshevistic idea of war. This was said to be neither nationalistic nor imperialistic, and they can admit none but a social motive to any bourgeois government in an age of imperialism. They reject the defence of their country — not in general, but in reactionary capitalist wars. Lenin maintained that as the war was an imperialistic one, it could not be supported, and that the main object of the Bolsheviks was peace and revolution, the workmen and peasants taking the power into their own hands, and severing their connection with capital. The ignorant must be patiently taught that all the horrors of the war were due to capitalist competition, and the sooner the workers took the place of the capitalists, the sooner Russia would become a true republic. In the early months of the revolution, Lenin had little support, and the March riots in Petrograd were not so much the work of the Bolsheviks as the result of general discontent following the military failures. However, they did join the revolution afterwards and tried to give it a definite political character, but there was no organization in advance, and their action simply called down on them a torrent of abuse. The continued discontent and disorder at the front counteracted this in some degree, and won for them more and more popularity. Then Kerensky's power collapsed, and in November the Bolsheviks seized Petrograd. Their object was to work for peace, if necessary in opposition to the Allies, while the revolution they aimed at was not political but on a social and international basis. Their aim was to lay the foundation of a social republic by revolutionary methods, and they were prepared to use force and ride rough-shod over the Constituent Assembly. Lenin himself was always opposed to a separate peace, but the signing of the humiliating peace of Brest-Litovsk was to save the social republic which was just getting on its feet, and which was to be the rallying ground for revolutionary Europe. Having thus achieved peace and revolution, the Bolsheviks found themselves in an anomalous position. They were in power in Petrograd but not in the provinces, and yet they had not the impudence to abolish the Constituent Assembly after the criticism of the Provisional Government. However, it was dispersed in January on the second day of its sitting, and instead was set up the ideal form of the Federal Republic of Soviets. Thus Russia possessed a government responsible to Parliament in the Central Executive Committee of the Soviet, re-elected every three months by the All-Russian Congress of Soviets. In Lenin's opinion, Bolshevism could only succeed by a perpetual proletarian dictatorship, iron labor discipline, enforced by severe penalties, abolition of free press; and syndicalism, while economy, industry and honesty on the part of the workmen and peasants are absolutely essential.

There are three ways in which a country may be exhausted—financially, physically and morally, and in all three has Russia been exhausted by the Bolsheviks. There is no trade, no press, no teaching; the population has dwindled, the people are starving. In general, there has been nothing more than a change from national to civil war. But what then do the Bolsheviks want? Power. At any price and at any cost, it is power which they want. They consider themselves socialists, and yet socialists are their most deadly enemies. To obtain the desired power, they have destroyed their army, betrayed Russia, and apparently taken for their motto robbery, murder and destruction. They have attracted to their ranks all those who have nothing to lose, and they attack all those who have anything which they may desire. It is not surprising then that the Soviet Government is not popular in Russia. There seems to be a variety of opinions as to whether the Bolsheviks are good or bad, desirable or undesirable, and their deeds as well. Opinions for both sides were cited. In conclusion, Miss Craig remarked that the phase of Bolshevism could not be considered merely as a new and higher form of democracy, for it is really no such thing. It is at bottom an outbreak of a very old disease — the strife between those who have and those who have not — and the disease is incurable. The solution of the Russian problem is urgently required, for Bolshevism, if allowed to spread, mean the doom of our race and civilization. Its triumph would mean ruin, not only to the classes but to the masses, as we have been shown by the establishment of the dictatorship in Russia. For the present, that is till Russia is again a political entity, all hope seems to be in the evolution of the prevailing chaos of a strong military dictatorship.

Miss Marguerite MacDougal then read a short paper on the condition of affairs in Finland both during and since the war period. Miss MacDougal began with the attempt to Russinize Finland which was made under Nicholas II, in 1898. The governor-general obtained a great deal of power and by an imperial manifesto in 1903 was made almost a dictator. But soon after this he was assassinated, and general discontent was rife in the country. With the advent of the war a process of Russinizing the Finnish army was put in force, but by the people themselves no interest was taken in the war until the Russian revolution of 1917. Then the question of Finland's relations to the empire was brought up, and finally the provisional Russian government decided to restore Finland's autonomy, but for some time there was a difference of opinion between the two countries as to the power and authority of the Grand Duke. This, however, was settled without open hostilities, and the next point raised was the advisability of granting Finland complete independence. This move was opposed in Russia on the grounds that it was inadvisable to have an independent state with frontiers extending to within one hour of Petrograd. Also it was feared that an independent Finland might join Sweden. However, the economic condition of the country called out loudly for the move, and after the fall of the Tsar, the Socialist Diet of Finland declared the independence of the country, but the Junkers, fearing for their feudal privileges, persuaded the Russian government to dissolve the Diet. The new Diet (Oct. 1917) had a non-socialist majority, elected on a very broad franchise. The next thing was the order by Lenin and Trotsky that the Russian military forces should withdraw from that part of Finland which they were occupying. This order was not, however, executed. On the contrary, the Russian policy seemed to be the retention of Russian troops in Finland for the purpose of aiding the Finnish socialists in bringing about a social revolution similar to that in Russia. This insurrection came in due course (Jan. 23, 1918), and constituted a veritable reign of terror, which lasted until the constitutional government, which established itself at Vasa, besought the people to re-establish law and order. This appeal was readily responded to, and almost as soon as they were organized the complete disarmament of the Russian troops was accomplished. Finland then turned to Germany for aid, and was at once given ammunition, and later on came the German occupation great brutality. Opinion in Finland of the country which was marked by now seems to be that the only salvation of the country lies in the throwing off of the German protection (if such it may be called) and the re-establishment, under the more favorable conditions of a world purged of Junkerdom. The third speaker was Miss Cockfield, who dealt with the problem of Poland. After a very brief summary of the constitutional history of that country, Miss Cockfield proceeded to the war period. In 1914 the Russians promised that Poland should be granted her independence, freedom of religion, speech, education, etc., etc., and also that the Poles should be politically united with the Russian Poles. But unfortunately circumstances did not turn out such as to allow Russia to fulfill her promise. Then in 1915 a Polish-Russian commission was appointed, consisting of six representatives of each country. The report of this commission advised administrative changes and a new constitution. In September of 1917 this new constitution materialized, and a Regency Council of three was put in charge of affairs. Various solutions to the Polish problem which have been brought forward from time to time have been considered, with the chief objections to each.

Before the meeting adjourned, the names of two new members were put before the club, and it was unanimously decided that Miss Marion Young (Arts 19) and Miss Katherine Taylor (Arts 18) should be invited to become members.

The next meeting will be held on Feb. 19, and the subject for the evening will be "The Future of Turkey's Asiatic Possessions."

MANDOLIN CLUB.

There will be a meeting of the above club at 7.15 Monday evening at Peate's. New music is to be practiced and a full turn-out of the members is expected.
